Biblical Words Describing Preaching

Over the years, the style of preaching has changed. In recent years, the impact of political correctness has created an atmosphere in many churches today where sin may be dealt with in a generic way but where the clarity of God preaching about the sins of the listeners has almost been removed. Young preachers, and some older ones, would do well to examine the kind of preaching which in the first century "...turned the world upside down" (Acts 17:6).

Have we lost sight of the fact that the preaching in the first century came about because God determined the message, and "they began to speak...as the Spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2:4)? Jesus' disciples were told that when they were confronted in the synagogues or brought before authorities, "Do not worry about how or what you should answer, or what you should say. For the Holy Spirit will teach you in that very hour what you should answer, or what you should say" (Luke 12:11-12). Preachers need to study to learn the kind of preaching done when God chose the style of preaching.

Look at how Jesus described the kind of preaching that was done by the Holy Spirit. "He will convict the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment" (John 16:8). When properly understood, the Greek word translated convict shows the kind of preaching God wanted in that day as well as in ours. Barclay says in defining that word, "It is used for the cross-examination of a witness, or a man on trial, or an opponent in an argument. It has always this idea of cross-examining a man until he sees and admits his errors or acknowledges the force of some argument which he had not yet seen." This concept stands in marked contrast to the use of the sophistry of human wisdom trying to suavely change lives of the listeners without upsetting their souls.

Trying to use the sophistry of our words to change lives without upsetting souls!

It is the word used to describe the preaching of John the Baptist when he openly confronted adulterous Herod (Luke 3:19). It is the word used to describe the public action God intended for preachers to do when they openly rebuked impenitent elders before the whole church (1 Tim. 5:20). It is used to describe what could happen when an unbeliever comes into the weekly assembly. "If...an unbeliever or an uninformed person comes in, he is convinced by all, he is convicted by all...so falling down on his face, he will worship God and report that God is truly among you" (1 Cor. 14:24-25).

Yet in our day, we tend to remove the convicting words of the Spirit and replace them with our own ideas. Why would we not bring to the forefront those book, chapter and verse words given so forcefully by God? Have you considered that by not using His word you might be quenching the Spirit?

Made a Big Impact Without Doing Anything Really Big

When you think about some of the great heroes in the Old Testament (and the ones we often talk about the most), it is interesting to consider that certain ones of them did not do something supernatural or even all that hard. Yet, by their simple actions, they made a big impact. While some heroes did miraculous deeds through the power of God, other heroes did basically ordinary deeds on behalf of their God. Consider a great illustration of this.

Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego were three young men who were out of their element. They did not look like, talk like, eat like, act like or worship like everyone else around them in Babylon. But they did not let that stop them (or even slow them) from honoring their God.

King Nebuchadnezzar made a gold image that was 90 feet tall, and he set it up to be worshiped by all the people. He gave explicit instructions exactly how and when he wanted every person to "fall down and worship the gold image" (Dan. 3:1-5). He also warned that "whoever does not fall down and worship shall be cast immediately into the midst of a burning fiery furnace" (3:6). The expectations were clear. The consequences of disobedience were understood. What could an ordinary follower of God do in such a situation?

Other heroes did basically ordinary deeds on behalf of their God

These men showed up. They likely knew what was coming and knew what the king was going to demand. But, they did not hide at home. They went where they were supposed to be. We must be "in" the world, just not "of" the world. The light of Christ must shine forth.

These men stood up. When everyone else bowed down to the king's image in worship, these three men did not flinch. They made it very evident by their actions (and even their non-action in refusing to bow) that they did "not serve [idolatrous] gods or worship the gold image" (3:12). We must make an obvious difference between who we are and where we stand over against what everybody else is doing.

These men spoke up. They first stated their absolute trust in their God (3:17). Then they affirmed their complete devotion to righteousness and their utter disdain for ungodliness (3:18). We must not be ashamed to speak about our God, even when others do not share the same loyalty that we do.

These men stirred up. Pompous Nebuchadnezzar became the Praising Nebuchadnezzar at the end of the chapter. Due to these three men showing up, standing up and speaking up, the king's heart was stirred up to bless God and to even exclaim, "...there is no other God who can deliver like this" (4:29). What they did was simple. The impact was big.

Reading with the Selah

There is a quote that is often attributed to Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, “Music is not in the notes but in the silence between.” Would it surprise you that the average person does not like the quiet stillness of silence? There are times that we enjoy it for a moment. Would you be willing to see how long could you go without talking or without filling that empty space of silence? There are so many things we do to keep from getting to that point where silence seems to overwhelm. There is a place in that silence where we can begin to think on or meditate on things that the noise of everyday life does not allow us.

There is a word in Hebrew, it shows up mostly in the Psalms, that is transliterated as Selah. This word seems to be direction for the singing or reading of the psalm. Most translate it as instruction to pause. I do not intend to make this word mean anything more than that. However, it does introduce a thought about our reading of the Bible. Of the Christian disciplines, we put a lot emphasis on reading, and there should be. “So faith comes from hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ” (Rom. 10:17). Most of us read it as a textbook—information to download and have on ready recall mode. We might read for the sake of just getting through it, maybe to unlock an achievement medal like the Made It

Slow down your reading, you be surprised what you find.

Through Leviticus Award or the Numbers Senses Award. To be fair, the Bible includes various types of literature, and those types might be read in different ways. Have we ever thought about reading it with more pauses? Not the, “I got distracted and I'm thinking about something else pause,” but a purposeful, clear, and untainted pause. Consider this passage, “Tremble, and do not sin; meditate in your heart upon your bed, and be still. Selah” (Psa. 4:4). What would happen if we added meditation to our reading schedule? “How blessed is the man who does not walk in the counsel of the wicked, nor stand in the path of sinners, nor sit in the seat of scoffers! But his delight is in the law of the LORD, and in His law he meditates day and night” (Psa. 1:1-2). Meditation has become a lost practice. Mostly because it takes up so much of our most precious commodity, time. We seem to have so little of it for the things we need to do, yet we make time for the things we want to do.

Reading with meditation is no more than taking the time to think on the passage. Think on how it applies to you. Or, how does it fit in God’s overall message? Try reading the Psalms with the Selah and practice the pause. Another exercise would be to read some of your favorite passages and put your own Selah in the text. Most importantly, slow down your reading and leave time for the silence between. I guarantee you will be surprised what you find.

Is that you? Are you “coming to worship” but “enjoying it less”? Or, have you stopped coming because you just “weren’t enjoying it” or maybe you’re not coming as much? Over the years, there have been others in your same position. Maybe it’s the preacher who “just isn’t doing it for me anymore.” Maybe it’s the songs that “we just keep singing to same ones.” Or maybe “not many people talk to me anyway.” Does any of this describe you?

Can I ask you a question? “Why do you come to worship?” What is it all about to you? While it is hard for all of us to remember at times, the focus of all that we do in worship is for our hearts to be looking to and praising God. Therefore, my primary consideration is not “what I get out of it” or “how much I enjoy it.” Worship is an action verb that focuses on the object of that act. It may help my thought pattern to ask, “What can I do in worship to keep my mind focused on my God, and to make sure He is enjoying it?” When I truly think about the object of my worship (who is so worthy) and Him enjoying it, then I want to worship and I know I will enjoy that. – DS

“Better than I deserve!”

So, how are you doing? “Better than I deserve!” Have you known anyone who responded in that way? For many such folks, it really didn’t matter what kind of day they were having. They could have had a rough morning and may have even been carrying a heavy burden of some kind. Yet, they really meant it—“Better than I deserve!” These kind of people have a positive outlook on life! They have a conscious awareness of the abundant and constant blessings of God! They have decided that life’s circumstances do not determine “how they’re doing”!

Because of the “exceedingly abundant” grace of God, we are all better than we deserve (1 Tim. 1:14). Through the ever-present and surpassing love of God, we are all better than we deserve (Rom. 8:31-39). By the limitless and overwhelming power of God “that works in us,” we are all better than we deserve (Eph. 3:20-21).

You don’t have to respond with those words, but do you believe—“I am better than I deserve”? – DS
